The POULTRY YARD

A Department Devoted To Building Up The Poultry Industry In Coffee County
BY J. F. BRUNSON

You know, when we look into the face of a new born babe, a thought of the future often comes to our minds, which in a sense is a possibility as to the child's future, what he might be, etc. His future existence is dependent upon his present care. We try to give him our very best, which is right that we should. If we are raising chickens for a profit in the future, it is right that we give the baby the best of care.

Little things count a lot in keeping baby chicks alive and getting them to grow big. Such a little thing as the temperature going a few degrees one way or the other usually plays havoc in the lives of the little chicks. Then there is the matter of keeping things clean, giving them air without exposing them to killing drafts, providing sunshine or its substitute, and dozens of other little things. They begin before chicks come and long after huff has changed to feathers.

The starting point in raising chicks is to determine when you want them. You'll have chicks and money ahead if you plan for early hatched chicks. You will have pullets ready for laying in August, September and October and the broilers will be ready for market before it's glutted. On the average, March and April hatched chicks pay best of all.

Getting in readiness before your chicks come should be the next step in your plan. If you have an old brooder house you will want to clean it from bottom to top. Scrub the doors with soap and water, drench the ceiling, walls, and floors with a strong coal tar disinfectant. A 57 per cent solution of Creolin or Zeneolium makes a good disinfectant. Creolin, carbolic acid, two parts to fifty parts water, is also good. The job of getting the house in order should be completed at least two weeks before any chicks are put into the brooder. After this strenuous cleaning program is finished, and not before, move the house to new ground if you have the movable kind. If you are using the brick brooder, which is permanent, be sure to do a good cleaning and disinfecting job and, if possible, change the soil about the building.

Perhaps you are planning to build new brooder houses this year. If so, get your first class plan and build according to the plan. About 10 x 12 is about as large as is needed for one brooder house or stove. Where you install the brooder, it is best to concrete your extra space in the house. By using gravel or cinders for an underbody you will find the expense will be low to make full concrete floor. In building your house be sure to arrange for proper ventilation so stale air can pass out, as well as fresh air coming in. Openings must not be arranged where a draft can touch your chicks.

Your house should face the South or Southwest, and should be placed on dry, well-drained land and by all means out of the path of any quantity of water during the rainy season. Where these buildings are located above the ground it is recommended to have a sub-floor and to place building paper between them.

It is costly to overcrowd chicks in a brooder house. Chicks crowded may seem to do alright for the first two weeks, but after that they begin to fall and sometimes never recover. If you use the brick brooder arrange your floor space against the furnace in several departments so as to divide the chicks. Poultry journals say one square foot to three chicks is the proper floor space for them.

Regardless of the type brooder you may use, test it out in advance of the arrival of your chicks to know that it is properly regulated and will give the proper amount of heat. For the first week chicks should have temperature from 95 to 97 degrees Fahrenheit. After this the temperature can be lowered a few degrees each week.

From the time chicks are put in the brooder until they have learned what feed, drink and grit are the litter should be covered with paper to prevent chicks eating litter. All droppings should be removed as often as possible during the first few hours, as this is where most diseases come with baby chicks. Cleanliness is most essential at this time. When chicks are over 48 hours old give them a drink of water with the chill removed and feed a high grade starter feed. The first few weeks are most important. Be sure to keep chicks from eating filth of any kind. The Purina plan of feeding says do not feed any grain until the afternoon of the fifth day, when you may give a small amount of chick chow. Or if you use an all-mash starter no grain is necessary. After the fifth day continue to keep starter feed before chicks with the addition of a light feed of chick chow in the morning, another at noon and a heavier feeding in the evening. Put grit or fine oyster shell in little hoppers by itself. From the seventh to the fourteenth day, the starter feed should be continuous before the chicks. Hoppers should be changed to larger ones and be sure they are made so that droppings cannot fall in them. Be sure there is plenty of drinking fountains for milk and water. These fountains should be scalded every day from the beginning. This is something we Southern people have never done. Just so it is an old pet. lid and will hold water is not sufficient. KEEP IT CLEAN. About the seventh week a growing mash should be substituted for the starter feed. About the fourth week it is advisable to arrange some little root poles across the back of the brooder. Begin with them about two inches high and gradually raise them, say about once each week. Use about a two-inch slot for these poles, placing them about five inches apart.

Don't buy common chicks for fall layers. Buy the chicks bred to lay and you will be pleased during the laying period.

Attends Purina Dealers' Meeting In Atlanta
Mr. James J. English, of W. L. English and Son, local Purina dealer, attended a convention of feed dealers in Atlanta, Ga., on Tuesday and Wednesday of last week. The meeting was sponsored by the Purina Mills, of St. Louis, and was attended by about 700 Purina dealers and officials of the company.

Mr. English reports a splendid meeting and royal entertainment during his visit to the convention.

Miss Irene Grisetti, of Enterprise, was the weekend guest of Miss Catherine Lee.

Miss Elizabeth Rowe, who teaches at the Southwestern, was called to her home in Tallahassee on account of the death of an aunt.

Miss Gracie Mae Ashurst was called to her home in Tallahassee on account of the death of an aunt.

Miss Ruby Folom and Wilma Ashurst visited the latter's parents in Grady, during the weekend.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Butler and children, of Columbus, Ga., were guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Cooper Friday and Saturday.

Misses Sam Reeves and Gaston Fullmer, of Troy, were business visitors at Elba Tuesday.

Mrs. W. P. Boyd is spending the week in Samson, where she is a guest of her daughter, Mrs. Lina Mize.

Mr. and Mrs. D. L. Kelly, of Montgomery, were guests of Misses Nettie Ruth and Mollie Blue Walker Sunday.

Misses Hazel Blair and Dell Stokes, of Opp, were guests of Miss Hazel Bonham Sunday.

Hon. P. B. Trawick is spending a few days in special legal work in Birmingham.

Just think of good old Coffee County, Alabama, and not a man who can claim this reward. You know that we should have hundreds of men in this good county needing all these requirements. But, alas, we do not have them, and instead, we have a great throng of people who are poverty stricken and who will remain so unless they make a change.

Mr. B. F. Micker got the extra calf this week. We have the promise of some more right away. Please remember that we have dropped all of the old numbers. If you want a calf, let me know, as I cannot go by the old requests as too many cannot take the calves after we have them by these numbers. Remember, we are still getting calves and you can get one if you want it. But you must send in a new request.

Making Doorposts Brings Profit To Farm Woman
HUNTSVILLE, Ala., Feb. 3.—Making doorposts out of old chisel and head boards is proving a profitable means for Mrs. George Miller, farm woman of Huntsville, Madison County. To date she has made 125 doorposts, which she sells for $1.00. She began last May.

Miss Elizabeth S. DeLoony, home demonstration agent, who has assisted with the enterprise, reports that Mrs. Miller enjoys making the doorposts and that she has had a steady market since she began.

The articles are made at old moments. Though Mrs. Miller's products meet keen competition she sells steadily, because of excellent construction.

This is one of the ways, Miss DeLoony said, that farm women of Alabama make pin money to use in buying things for their homes. Women in other counties make similar articles during spare time and find a ready market. They are assisted by home demonstration agents.

MISS VAUGHN AND HARPER ARE HOSTESSES—
Misses Carrie Vaughn and Fernel Harper were joint hostesses at a delightful party given in honor of the Troy basket ball team, at home of Miss Harper, on Friday evening.

The home was beautifully decorated in the Troy Teachers' College colors, Crimson and White. Bridge and other popular games were played.

Late in the evening the hostess served sandwiches and punch to fifty guests.

Mr. Ross Clark went to Andalusia Monday on business.

Miss Fernel Harper returned last week from a delightful visit to her sister, Mrs. Fred Mays, in Gulfport, Miss.

The many friends of Mr. S. H. Brock will regret to learn that he is quite sick at his home on Smith Avenue.

Miss Gracie Mae Ashurst was called to her home in Tallahassee on account of the death of an aunt.

Names Vegetables For Planting Now

AUBURN, Ala., Feb. 3.—Many vegetables can be planted in February to cross the damage done by frosts and give Alabama tables an adequate supply of the palatable, health-producing products of the garden. Julian Brown, of Auburn, expert of the all-year garden, and extension horticulturist at the Alabama Polytechnic Institute, made this statement in his February garden suggestions to Alabama farmers.

"The exact date of planting varies with the section of the State and weather conditions," the specialist said, "but practically all of the following vegetables may be planted some time in February: asparagus, beets, Brussels sprouts, broccoli, cabbage, carrots, cauliflower, chard, collards, kale, kohlrabi, lettuce, mustard, onions, parsley, parsnips, English peas, Irish potatoes, radishes, rhubarb (roots), spinach, turnips and underground. "Asparagus should certainly be in every home," he continued. "One-year-old crowns should be set immediately if possible. Mary Washington is a leading variety. Brussels sprouts, broccoli, cabbage and cauliflower should also be planted as early as possible. Turn all do best when planted in a hole and cold frame and later transplanted to the open field. Cauliflower, particularly, is a cold weather crop, and must be started early and rushed to maturity before the arrival of hot weather. Broccoli is an Italian vegetable and has been widely grown in Alabama, but should be given more consideration."

The specialist recommends rhubarb for North Alabama, only, because it requires a cool season. It is a very heavy feeder and requires rich soil and heavy applications of fertilizer, he added.

New York experts have determined that there are 26 different kinds of disagreeable noises. We suspect that radios and talkies furnish at least 25 of them.

Names Vegetables For Planting Now

AUBURN, Ala., Feb. 3.—Many vegetables can be planted in February to cross the damage done by frosts and give Alabama tables an adequate supply of the palatable, health-producing products of the garden. Julian Brown, of Auburn, expert of the all-year garden, and extension horticulturist at the Alabama Polytechnic Institute, made this statement in his February garden suggestions to Alabama farmers.

"The exact date of planting varies with the section of the State and weather conditions," the specialist said, "but practically all of the following vegetables may be planted some time in February: asparagus, beets, Brussels sprouts, broccoli, cabbage, carrots, cauliflower, chard, collards, kale, kohlrabi, lettuce, mustard, onions, parsley, parsnips, English peas, Irish potatoes, radishes, rhubarb (roots), spinach, turnips and underground. "Asparagus should certainly be in every home," he continued. "One-year-old crowns should be set immediately if possible. Mary Washington is a leading variety. Brussels sprouts, broccoli, cabbage and cauliflower should also be planted as early as possible. Turn all do best when planted in a hole and cold frame and later transplanted to the open field. Cauliflower, particularly, is a cold weather crop, and must be started early and rushed to maturity before the arrival of hot weather. Broccoli is an Italian vegetable and has been widely grown in Alabama, but should be given more consideration."

The specialist recommends rhubarb for North Alabama, only, because it requires a cool season. It is a very heavy feeder and requires rich soil and heavy applications of fertilizer, he added.

There are now more than 121,951,550 people in the United States, according to the Census Bureau. The Immigration Bureau says that in the entire country there is one birth every 13 seconds, one death every 28 seconds, one immigrant entering the country every 1½ minutes and one immigrant leaving the country every 6 minutes.

STATE OF ALABAMA, County of Coffee, ss. I, H. C. JOHNSON, Cashier of the above-named bank, do solemnly swear that the above statement is true and correct and believe.

H. C. JOHNSON, Cashier
Subscribed and sworn to before me this 9th day of January, 1930.
Lallie Harper, Notary Public.

C. E. DORSEY, R. S. BOYD, JNO. M. GARRETT, Directors.

When we get about our farm work planning to do this and to do that when the year is gone we find ourselves back in the same old place with an added year to our life, and in some cases with a debt accumulating against us. It is high time we were taking thought of a change and to know that what we are doing is going to give us a fair return and a profit over the actual expense of the project.

When we plant cotton crops with the uncertainty that this country has had for the past four years, what can we look forward to with another crop? With favorable weather conditions and no boll weevils we can make cotton, but with the weather here we have no chance but a failure if we depend on cotton.

These items are being given to you with the hope that you can see something else for the future. It is my prediction that in a few years this country will be mining entirely different crops from what we now raise, and that a money crop will be an item which gives us money every month of the year.

Someone was telling me the other day that some specialist was informing people of the East that Alabama was the best prepared of any State in the Union for a future dairy country. Of course, considerable changes will have to be made as to pasturage, feed, etc., but this is evident that someone is seeing ahead for us and is giving us glimpses of the future.
